If you haven't yet claimed your Apple Music for Artists account, you'll need to be verified today. CLAIM YOUR PROFILE I don't dislike Apple Music as a platform, I think it's easy to use and it's a reliable source of streaming. The problem with this program lies in the problems I've had with getting support. First of all, when I uploaded more music after a few months, it created a brand new artist page, leaving me with an artist page with my EP, and one with 2 singles. I asked them to merge this which took about 2 weeks (mind you it says 5 working days max). You'd think this is where the problem ends, but no. Now instead of having access to one side and not the other, I didn't have access to my artist account at all. I have reached out to them and have continued to get an answer. It's been two more weeks. Finally, when I ever had access to the artist page, it was very stingy about a picture of my entire band, square cropped and fit into the frame, so I could never even customize my own page. I think it has great potential to be more user-friendly, but I don't expect the change any time soon, it was easier when it was just a site. Show a quick snapshot of your music's overall performance. Identify milestones and best when you're the best in an instant. Expand your understanding with details of trends over time. Discover which of your songs will be shazamed the most. See how many people listen to your music over time. Your artist image allows you to express your personality and show your fans who you are. Find out which playlists drive the most views of your songs and see the demographics of your best listeners. You can quickly see where your listeners are. Just click and zoom in to countries and cities to see more. Users designated as an administrator or profile editor, with profile rights, can an artist image to be displayed on Apple Music, the iTunes Store, and Shazam.
